

Creating a national movement to transform medical education

About

MedEdNext is an initiative of the Medical College of Wisconsin | Robert D. and Patricia E. Kern Institute for the Transformation of Medical Education, and the National Transformation Network (NTN).

Mission

MedEdNext is developing innovative ways to prepare physicians for what is next in healthcare. We are transforming Four Pillars: Faculty, Students, Curriculum, and Culture & Systems. We are redefining medical education from pre-med through practice by instilling in physicians the Triple Aim: Character, Competence and Caring.

History

In February 2017, the Kern Institute was realized in partnership and with support from the Kern Family Foundation, and Stephen and Shelagh Roell. The Kern Institute and NTN named the national initiative to transform medical education MedEdNext.

Leadership

Cheryl A. Maurana, PhD, has been named the Stephen and Shelagh Roell Endowed Chair, Professor, and Founding Director of the Kern Institute. She will continue to serve MCW as Senior Associate Dean in the School of Medicine, Director of Advancing a Healthier Wisconsin, and Vice President for Academic Outreach.

Jose Franco, MD, is Associate Director for the Kern Institute. He will continue to serve MCW as Associate Dean for Educational Improvement in the School of Medicine.
